Educators Assess Impact of Grove City

By Tom Mirga

WASHINGTON—Educators and civil-rights officials generally agreed last week that the impact of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision limiting the scope of the federal law barring sex discrimination in federally aided education programs will vary from school to school across the country.

According to the officials, the presence or absence of state-level sex-equity laws, coupled with the type of aid received by the schools, will largely determine the effect of the Court's ruling.

High Court Asked To Enforce Title IX 'Surgica

By Tom Mirga

WASHINGTON—A Justice Department lawyer told the U. S. Supreme Court last week that the federal law barring sex discrimination in education should be applied "surgically" to the component parts of a school or college, not to institutions generally.

Acting Solicitor General Paul M. Bator told the Justices during oral arguments in Grove City College v. Bell (Case No. 83-2982) that they need only to rule on the narrow question of whether the college's financial aid department is a recipient of federal aid because about 20 percent of its students receive federal grants.
